KALARPOL 6th May 1930

Though young, they defied
The life of slave, the life of shame,
They lived, and they died
Like heroes that ever came.
They bled and they smiled
With blood baught a Nations fame,
Life, all, they sacrificed,
That the Nation may live,
and have a name.

Monoranjan Sen, 16 | Debi Gupta, 17 | Rajat Sen, 18 | Swadesh Roy, 18

Threw prudence to the wind
When they heard the Nations groan.
Cursed the cautious mind That weigh and barter for its own,
Vibrating through every vein,
The maddening love of Freedom came
They serged and fel like drops of rain,
Let others follow that spurn
the life of shame.
